

ABSTRACT

A medical balloon may be configured by at least partially inflating the medical balloon and forming at least one primary lobe in the balloon. The primary lobe extends from a central portion of the balloon. The primary lobe may be manipulated to form at 5 least two secondary lobes therefrom. The balloon may then be deflated and the secondary lobes wrapped around the balloon.